Your belly. Take this measurement whilst standing and seated. The standing measurement is a relaxed posture, i.e. not slouched. When seated we need the biggest measurement. Your belly is not your trouser or waist size.

Your sternum to the top edge of your duty trousers measurement. The Sternum is the point where the collar bones meet - just below the Adam’s Apple. It is also the point where the bottom of a tie knot usually rests. The seated measurement will measure less than the standing.

Nape (Where the neck meets the back) to the top edge of your duty or work trousers. The nape is the highest protruding backbone found a little lower than the hairline. This bone can be found better by tilting your head backwards and forwards.

Do not tilt your head forwards whilst your assistant takes this measurement.

The picture shows the approximate position using a tie.
